The request for reconsideration is not persuasive.

The Applicant argues on page 7, lines 7-15, that the Examiner erroneously read "merchandise" to include travel services. Among discloses a system which allows a buyer to mix and match various components of a tour package; and reduces the cost of the tour package by eliminating the middleman (paragraph 0053). Therefore, the examiner believes the merchandise to be components of a tour package. Pugliese was submitted as a secondary reference to show the user entering information with a data storage device.

The Applicant also argues that Among does not teach selling 'tangible merchandise", however, according to "Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, 10 Edition", "tangible" means "capable of being identified or realized by the mind". Therefore, components of a tour package are not intangible although the added material "purchasing tangible merchandise" having a "per-unit price" is not supported by the applicant's original disclosure.
